

Additional Scenes/Ambient Dialogue - Settlement Stockpile

Scene 1

Ysalotta:

1. You hungry, Elethe? Got some bones boiling for broth later.

Elethe:

1. [questioning] Bone broth, Ysalotta, again? Could you perhaps prepare something with more adequate nutritional value?

Ysalotta:

1. Oh, stop complaining. You know you love the juicy bits of the marrow just as much as I do.
2. Besides, it's either bone broth or boar dripping. Take your pick.

Elethe:

1. [deadpan] Fine. Bone broth it is. Just try and take the gristle out of it this time.

Scene 2

Elethe:

1. Have you seen my Frost Mirriam? I left it by the counter earlier.

Ysalotta:

1. Frost Marion? Strange name, what does she look like?

Elethe:

1. Mirriam, Ysalotta, Frost Mirriam. I need it for my alchemical practice. You must know it, it's a leafy, green herb.

Ysalotta:

1. [abruptly] I don't know what you're talking about, there's nothing leafy or green around here! Although I did throw some dry grass into the rabbit stew earlier.
2. At least, I think it was dried grass.

Elethe:

1. [sighing] That wasn't... you know what, never mind.

Scene 3

Ysalotta:

1. You know, I could teach you a few things in the kitchen.

Elethe:

1. [scoffing] Cookery? Me? I hardly think so, dear.

Ysalotta:

1. [matter-of-fact] There's more to life than books, spells and studying, Elethe. Come on, let me show you how to skin a boar. It'll be fun!

Elethe:

1. [haughty] Sounds... delightful. But I think I'll pass on this occasion. I'm at a crucial stage in my research.

Ysalotta:

1. Fine. You don't know what you're missing.